SOCIETY NEWS

Field Trip in April

A field trip to Vancouver Washington is scheduled for the 18th of April. The Clark County Genealogical Society and Library has moved to a new building.

"The Clark County Genealogical Society library is a private library that is open to the general public in support of the Society's purpose to encourage, foster, educate and organize activities related to genealogy. You will find friendly librarians on duty to help you use the library. The library collection includes over 8000 items. The emphasis is on genealogical material from Washington and Oregon, with most of the local coverage being of Clark and neighboring SW Washington counties. We have items from all US states and several foreign countries as well as many surname genealogies. " Check them out on their Facebook Page! <https://www.facebook.com/ccgs/wa/>

Timeless Tombstones

Portland Mausoleum

Wilma Dawson Hostetler

Wilma Dawson Hostetler was born in Concordia Kansas in 1871, daughter of Jacob and Melvina Dawson. The Dawson's came to Oregon in 1899 and settled in Heppner Oregon. Wilma married Jesse Coldren Hostetler in Kansas in 1890 and they moved to The Dalles where Mr. Hostetler would become an important employee of the French Banking Company and also sold insurance. Jesse and Wilma would build a home in what is now Chenoweth and start a farm located next to Chenoweth Creek called Chenoweth Cove Farms. The Hostetler's grew market vegetables and orchard fruits. The three story house is still standing today and is located on Irvine St.

In 1903, tragedy struck the Dawson family. On June 14, 1903, an unexpected flash flood hit the town of Heppner Oregon and killed 238 people. Jacob and Melvina Dawson were among the victims. They are buried in the IOOF Cemetery in The Dalles. In 1922, economic status of the French Company Bank started to falter and by the end of 1928 Jesse Wilma and Jesse's brother and wife had moved to Portland to start a new business and Jesse would continue to sell insurance. Jesse died in 1936 and Wilma lived with her daughter Leona Mosher and husband till her death in 1956. Jesse and Wilma are interred at the Wilhelm's Portland Mausoleum .

Natural Disasters and Our Genealogy

Often our research leads us to a dead end or brick wall. Its often very wise to do a little history research into any natural disasters , plagues, fires, floods which may had occurred at the time in which we are investigating. In January, the members of the genealogical society started a project to help other members solves their dead end research and two of the cases were because of a natural disaster or event. One query was in the San Francisco earthquake time period and the other was the Civil War. Wars and conflicts also seemed to be a common factor in some of our conclusions. Below is some good reading from others in the genealogy community commenting on natural disasters and other events that effect our research.

"Wouldn't it be nice if all the branches on our family trees were filled with bright shiny leaves that reflected only good kin and happy times? The truth is, most of our pasts are dotted with blemishes, and bad things did happen, often to good people. History is blanketed with disheartening tales of devastation and loss, and at one time or another we may discover a family story of a great aunt who perished in some horrible epidemic, or some other relative who died as a result of a flood, fire, transportation mishap, or other accident. Certainly, it may be difficult for us today to comprehend the everyday adversity that befell our ancestors, or the lasting hardships they endured as a result. But as genealogists, we can often find important clues among the rubble. This article will discuss five ways to learn how diseases, disasters, and distress may have impacted your family's history".

Discover Genealogy

Discover Genealogy has a eighteen part series "Disasters and Family Misfortunes on their blog. This a excellent series from floods, heat waves, landslides and even comets and meteorites. The blog is authored by W. Wayne Shephard, genealogist and lecturer from Canada and is a engineer and geoscientist from Alberta Canada. Following a long career as a geologist in the oil and gas industry, Wayne now pursues genealogy as a hobby and as an occasional, professional consultant. In forty years of business-related work he learned and practiced research, writing and management, skills he has transferred to his studies concerning family history. Though no longer actively working as a geologist, Wayne continues to be a life member of the Association of Professional Engineers and Geoscientists of Alberta.

The blog can be accessed here: <https://discovergenealogy.blogspot.com/2019/10/natural-disasters-and-family.html>

<https://discovergenealogy.blogspot.com/p/w-wayne-shephard-personal-biography.html>

Examples of how people endured natural and environmental changes will continue to be published on the Mother Nature's Test blog in subsequent posts. There is no shortage of stories about how nature has affected the lives of people around the world and throughout history.

Privacy Is Big Issue For Genetic Testing Websites

A article recently published from ABC News by Julia Jacobo states that the owners of GedMatch have vowed to strict privacy policies for law enforcement. The company has 1.7 million customers and has recently been purchased by Verogen, Inc. The company has helped in solving 70 major violent crimes . The company offers a "Opt-In" permissions policy for customers wishing to share their results with parties outside their families. <https://abcnews.go.com/US/owner-genealogy-website-gedmatch-vows-protect-users-search/story?id=67655654>

Why Genealogical Societies Are Important

Heritage Consulting , a genealogical research firm recently posted on their blog : "With the increase of information available on the internet, it seems that the popularity of genealogical societies is decreasing. Many people wonder if it is still worth their time and investment to join a genealogical society. There are many reasons that you may want to consider joining a genealogical society to enhance your genealogical research. These benefits can go a long way toward furthering your research and enhancing your project. Here are just a few of the reason why you should consider joining a genealogical society".

National Archives , Seattle to close -Press Release

The National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) facility in Seattle, WA, has been approved for eventual closure and sale. The facility was recommended for sale by the Public Buildings Reform Board (PBRB) and approved for sale by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) through the authorities and process established in the Federal Asset Sales and Transfer Act of 2016, as amended (FASTA).

A specific date has not been set for the closure of our Seattle facility, and we are not taking any immediate actions that will impact our customers. We expect the entire process of sale to take approximately 18 months and we have requested to stay in the building for an additional three years following the sale. We will continue to offer all services and maintain our current operating hours for the immediate future. We will communicate with our customers and stakeholder organizations when we have more information and as we develop our plans. We will also seek to include input from our stakeholders in order to inform our plans and decisions.

When we eventually close our physical presence in Seattle, we will continue to provide public access to our archival records. Some of our most popular records have been digitized and are available online. Members of the public can request copies of any available archival record (digital or analog) by email, telephone, or in writing. These records will also be available for in-person access in the research room at their new location. We are planning to expand our digitization efforts to make more records available free of charge and regardless of location.

We recognize that the closure of our facility will have a negative impact on researchers, Federal agencies, and other customers that use our facility. As we begin planning for the eventual closure of the facility, we will engage with local researchers and other stakeholders to find opportunities to smooth the transition for the public, support Federal agencies and the local researcher community, and ensure continued access to our records after the move.

From the Washington State Genealogical Society

Dear Members;

It seems like our profession and passion are taking some hard hits! First it was a changes to access of Birth, Marriage & Death records in WA State. Then a few weeks ago it was 500% cost increases proposed to obtain copies of records from Immigration & Naturalization from 1906-1956. WSGS has been active in trying to mitigate these proposals. Now this!

In case you have not heard the alarming news, the Feds have slated the Pacific NW Regional National Archives in Seattle for closing. No regional input was sought, no prior notification or chance to give opinions. This action would be a huge loss to our genealogical community. Only a fraction of this archive of regional records have been digitized. The records are all slated to be moved to Kansas City, MO and Riverside, CA, essentially making them inaccessible to regional researchers. To say nothing of the loss of the collective knowledge of the staff at our regional facility.

Sincerely,

Virginia Majewski, President, Washington State Genealogical Society

Preserving The Records

Ever been turned down for requests of records from government agencies, library or historical archival information?

Reclaim The Records, a non profit organization has been established to help researchers obtain copies of records that are available to the public.

The organization consists of 5300 genealogists and history researchers that through legal means, The Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) gain access to records that otherwise are not accessible.

RTR on Facebook :

<https://www.facebook.com/ReclaimTheRecords>

A webinar on the on this organization and a syllabus can be found here;

https://familytreewebinars.com/download.php?webinar_id=956

The organization is fighting hard to keep records available to the public. Many states are changing their accessibility laws to prevent the access to many records that are public domain.
