SPECIAL REPORT:

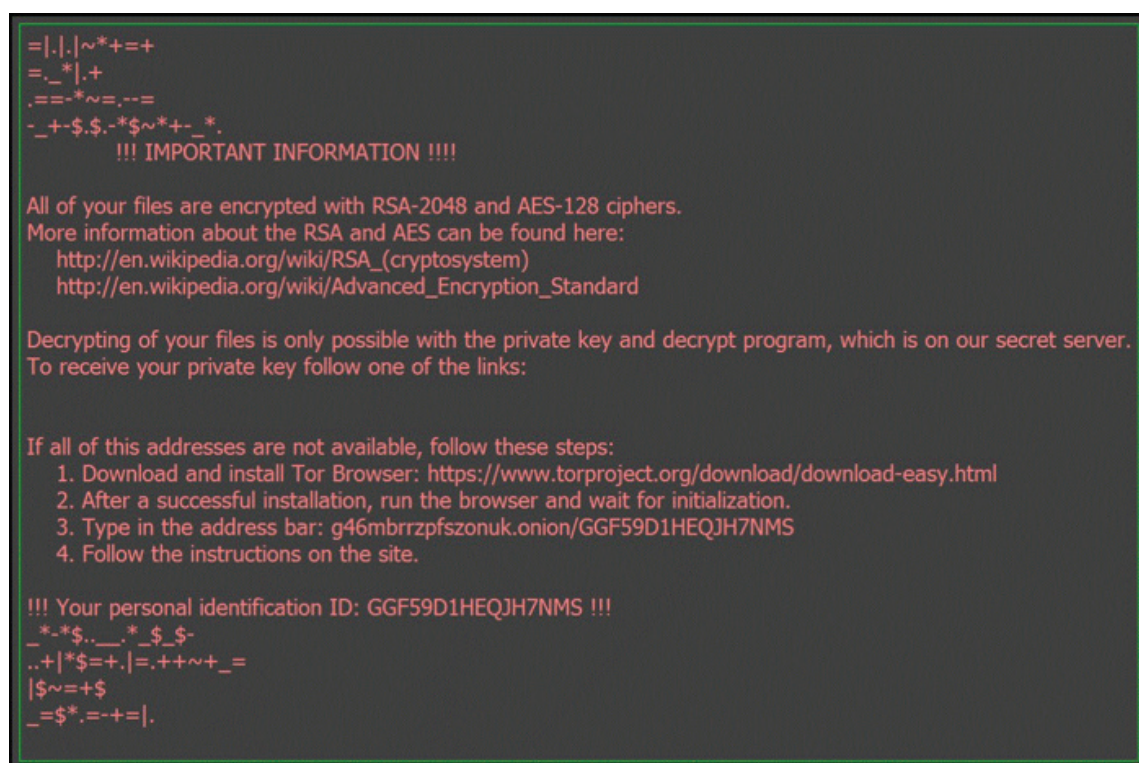

SEPTEMBER 2017 – RANSOMWARE
PHISHING ATTACKS LURE EMPLOYEES,
BEAT MACHINE LEARNING TOOLS:

Part III of the Evolving IKARUSdilapidated
and Locky Ransomware Series

If Your Copier / Scanner Calls, Don't Answer
(Until You Know It's Really Them)

September 2017 Special Report (Part III of IKARUS/Locky Ransomware Series)

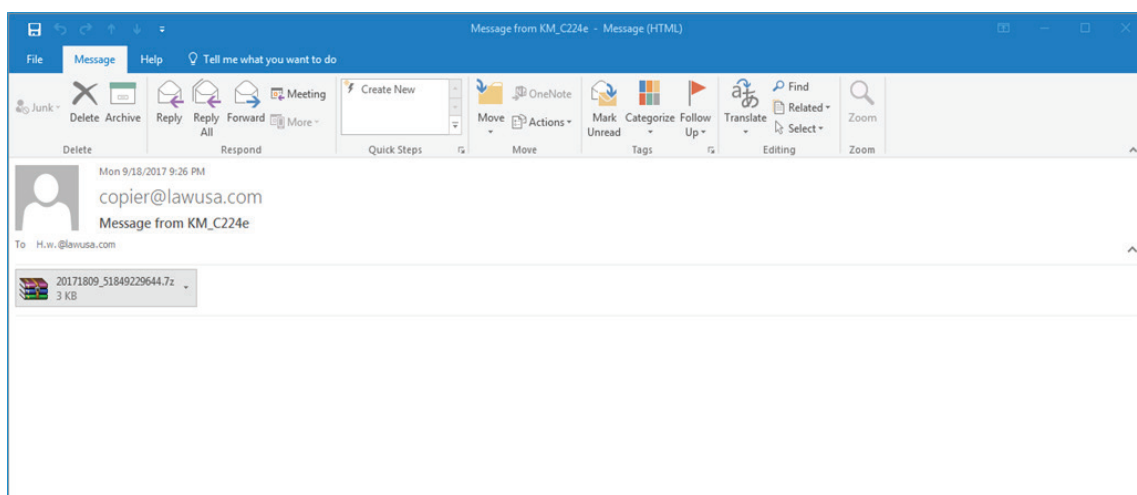

A late September wave of new ransomware attacks has occurred, building on attacks first discovered by the Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab this summer. This newest campaign mimics your vendors and even your trusty office copier/scanner/printer from industry leader Konica Minolta. It uses social engineering to engage victims and is carefully designed to slip past machine learning algorithm-based tools from leading cybersecurity vendors, infect your machines, encrypt their data, and extract a bitcoin ransom.

Ransom demand in September 18-21, 2017 attacks.

This new, 3rd wave of related 2017 ransomware attacks uses a botnet of zombie computers (usually connected to networks through well-known ISPs) to coordinate a phishing attack which sends the emails to victims' accounts. As with the 1st and 2nd waves, in early and late August 2017 respectively, this campaign utilizes a Locky ransomware payload.

The larger of the two attacks in this 3rd Locky ransomware wave is presented as a scanned document emailed to you from your organization's scanner/printer (but is actually from an outside hacker-controlled machine). Employees today scan original documents at the company scanner/printer and email them to themselves and others as a standard practice, so this malware-laden email looks quite innocent but is anything but harmless (and most definitely is not from your organization's Konica Minolta copier/scanner).

Email with subject "Message KM_C224e" looks like an email coming from the Konica Minolta (KM) C224e copier machine. As with real emailed scans, there is no text in the body of the email.

One element of the sophistication here is that the hacker-sent email includes the scanner/printer model number that belongs to the Konica Minolta C224e, one of the most popular models among business scanner/printers, commonly used in European, South American, North American, Asian, and other global markets.

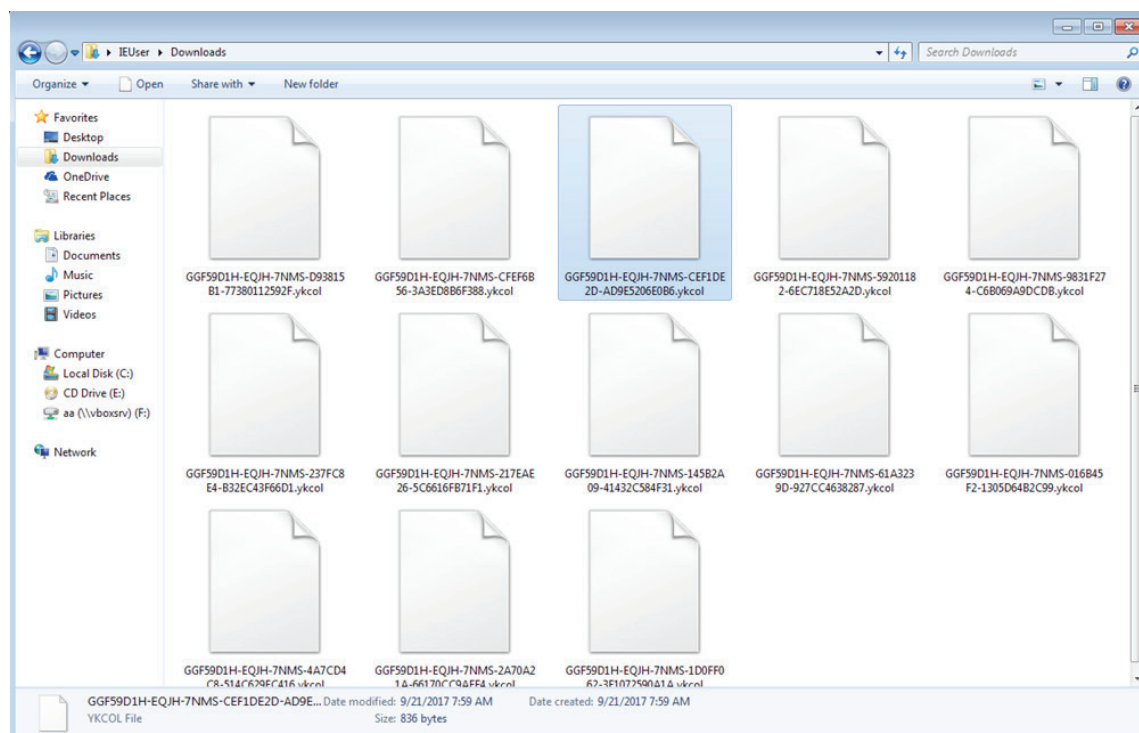

The Konica Minolta C224e.

September 18, 2017: Debut of “.ykol” and Other Tricks

Both campaigns started on September 18, 2017, and appear to have effectively ended on September 21, 2017. These two attacks differ. One is imitating an email coming from your office copier /scanner machine (featuring the subject, “Message from KM_C224e”), while the second one is designed to appear as an email related to a question about the status of a vendor invoice (featuring the subject, “Status of invoice”).

In contrast to the initial 2017 IKARUSdilapidated Locky campaign (which distributed malware with the “.diablo” extension and a Visual Basic Script (and has a “.vbs” extension)), and the 2nd later in August in which the “.lukitus” extension via JavaScript files were used, both September attacks have interesting variations aimed to not only fool users with social engineering, but also to fool security administrators and their machine learning algorithms and signature-based tools.

The encrypted documents in both September attacks have a “.ykol” extension and the “.vbs” files are distributed via email. This shows that malware authors are developing and changing methods to reach more users and bypass security approaches that use machine learning and pattern recognition.

Global Threat

Here is a heat map of the first new attack on September 18, 2017, featuring the “Message from KM_C224e” subject line followed by the source countries of the machines used in the botnet to send the emails:

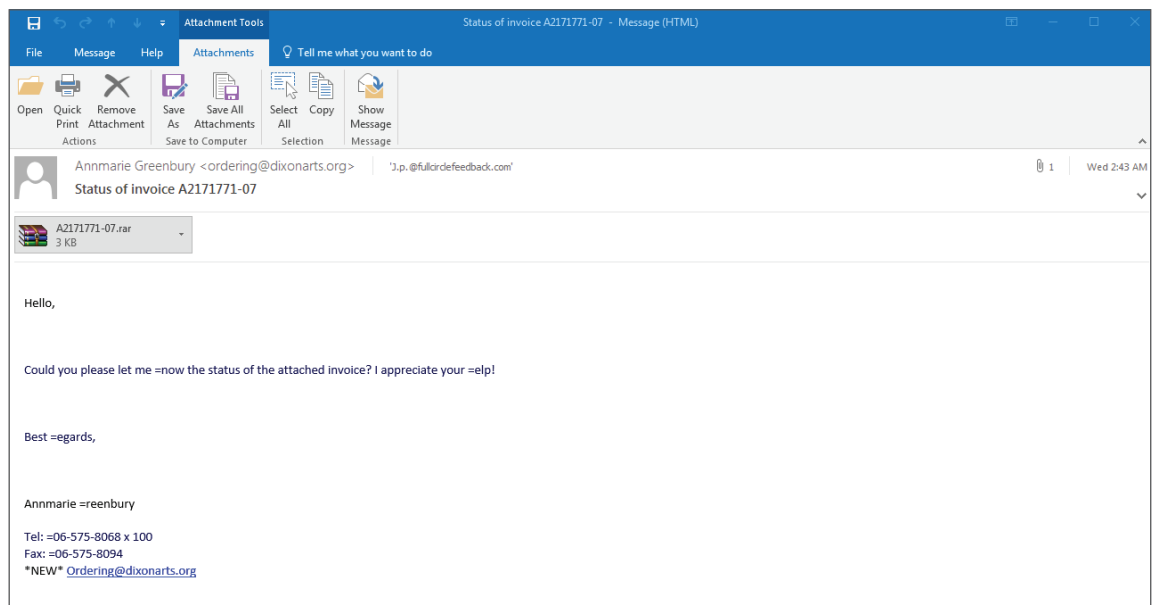

Country	Sum - Count Of Emails
Vietnam (VN)	26,985
Mexico (MX)	14,793
India (IN)	6,190
Indonesia (ID)	4,154

ISPs in general were co-opted heavily in this attack. This illustrates the sophistication of the attack as well as endpoint cyber-defense inadequacies and ineffective network and website security. Here are the leading range owners detected in the “Message from KM_C224e” attack:

Range Owner	Sum - Count Of Emails
Vietnam Posts and Telecommunications (VNPT)	26,985
VDC	14,793
Lusacell	6,190
Cablemas Telecomunicaciones SA de CV	4,154
Turk Telekom	2,168
Cablevision SA de CV	2,207

The smaller of the 2 prongs in this September campaign sends phishing emails with the subject, “Status of invoice” and appears to be from a local vendor, even including a greeting of “Hello,” a polite request to view the attachment, a signature, and contact details from a fictitious vendor employee.

Example of “Status of invoice” phishing email in September 2017 IKARUSdilapidated attack.

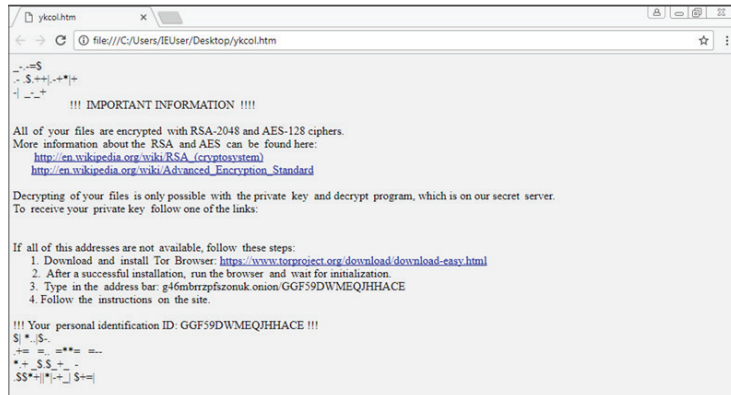

When the attachment is clicked, it appears as a compressed file to be unpacked:

Here you can see a sample of the scripting, which is quite different than that used in the attacks earlier in August 2017:

Here is another view of the “ransom note” which then appears:

The ransom demand range of .5 bitcoins to 1 bitcoin in both new cases mirrors that of the August attacks. On September 18, 2017 the value of 1 bitcoin equaled just over $4,000.00 US Dollars (and 3,467.00 Euros).

This heat map illustrates detections of the September 18, 2017 attack featuring the “Status of invoice” subject line. The Americas, Europe, India, and Southeast Asia were impacted heavily, but Africa, Australia, and many islands were also hit by these attacks.

The Scope

The phishing and Trojan experts from the Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab (part of Comodo Threat Research Labs) detected and analyzed more than 110,000 instances of phishing emails at Comodo-protected endpoints within just the first three days of this September 2017 campaign.

The attachments were read at Comodo-protected endpoints as “unknown files,” put into containment, and denied entry until they were analyzed by Comodo’s technology and, in this case, the lab’s human experts.

The Lab’s analysis of emails sent in the “Message from KM_C224e” phishing campaign revealed this attack data: 19,886 different IP addresses were used from 139 different country code top-level domains.

The “Status of invoice” attack utilized 12,367 different IP addresses from 142 country code domains. There are a total of 255 top level country code domains maintained by the Internet Assigned Numbers Authority (IANA), meaning both of these new attacks targeted over half of the nation states on earth.

“These types of attacks utilize both botnets of servers and individuals’ PCs and new phishing techniques using social engineering for unsuspecting office workers and managers. This enables a very small team of hackers to infiltrate thousands of organizations and beat A.I. and machine learning-dependent endpoint protection tools, even those leading in Gartner’s recent Magic Quadrant.” said Fatih Orhan, head of the Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab and Comodo Threat Research Labs (CTRL). “Because the new ransomware appears as an unknown file, it takes a 100% ‘default deny’ security posture to block or contain it at the endpoint or network boundary; it also requires human eyes and analysis to ultimately determine what it is – in this case, new ransomware.”

Attack Data – A Deeper Dive

Diving into the data of the September 18-21, 2017 wave of attacks a bit deeper, the Appendices below includes more details on the machines used in the attacks.

Appendix

NOTE: To compare the details of these September 2017 attacks with the two IKARUSdilapidated campaigns of August 2017, see Part I and II of the Comodo Intelligence Lab Special Report entitled, “SPECIAL REPORT: AUGUST 2017 – IKARUSdilapidated: Locky Ransomware Family Back with a New Email Phishing Campaign Attack.” As the malware payload and ransom elements are the same in all the August and September attacks, please see the original Part I report to review those elements.

About The Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab

The Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab (the Lab) monitors, filters and contains, and analyzes malware, ransomware, viruses and other “unknown” potentially dangerous files 24x7x365 in over 190 countries around the world. With 5 offices spread across the Americas, Asia and Europe (and staff covering over 190 countries), the Lab is made up of more than 120 IT security professionals, ethical hackers, computer scientists and engineers (all full-time Comodo Lab employees) analyzing millions of potential pieces of malware, phishing, spam or other malicious/unwanted files and emails every day. The Lab also works with trusted partners in academia, government and industry to gain additional insights into known and potential threats.

The Lab is a key part of the Comodo Threat Research Labs (CTRL), whose mission is to use the best combination of cybersecurity technology and innovations, machine learning-powered analytics, artificial intelligence and human experts and insights to secure and protect Comodo customers, business and public sector partners and the public community.
