'Batman' and 'Star Trek' TV Collectibles To Be Auctioned

A longtime TV memorabilia collector is putting props and costumes from "Batman," "Star Trek" and other shows up for auction. James Comisar said 400 items from his collection will be for sale. That includes the Riddler's green jacket from the first episode of "Batman" and a protective glass "bat shield" from the camp 1960s series. Also going on the block is the egg-shaped spaceship from "Mork & Mindy."

Rita Rudner Delivers One-Liners At The Sharon

Rudner went on to become the longest-running solo comedian in the history of Las Vegas.

By KRISTEN FIORE
Daily Sun Senior Staff Writer

Las Vegas comedian Rita Rudner floated out onto the stage of The Sharon L. Morse Performing Arts Center wearing a flowing, bright pink dress.

"Thank you for coming to my early bird special," she said at the beginning of her 5 p.m. show Thursday. "I hope I'm not too dressed up for 5 in the afternoon."

The audience applauded. "Well, good," she said. "After this I can take you into the back and read your fortune."

She joked that she wanted to give a shout out to her fashion designer, and that his name was "On Sale."

Rudner grew up in Miami and went to New York at the age of 15 to be a dancer on Broadway. In Manhattan, she discovered her love for comedy and eventually went on to become the longest-running solo comedian in the history of Las Vegas, selling 1.5 million tickets and winning multiple awards.

Rudner is known for her hilarious one-liners, and there was no shortage of them in her Thursday show.

The theater filled with hearty laughter as she joked about life in Las Vegas.

"Vegas is changing," Rudner said. "It's getting a little bit classier. There's an art museum. It's a drive through, though. And we have a ballet now. A topless ballet."

Marge and Bob Bettendorf, of the Village of Amelia, came to the show after enjoying Rudner on TV.

"It's daily routine-type comedy that I like, and she does everyday comedy," Marge said. "Her delivery is great and I thoroughly enjoy her."

Gladys Craig and Eileen Reed, of the Village of Lynnhaven, brought friends to the show after watching her videos online.

"It's not raunchy, but it's really, really human," Craig said. "She's also kind."

Rudner did have a personable way of joking about the elements of daily life.

"One of the worst things about getting old is the mean cards people send you," Rudner said. "I got one once that had a picture of a rotting corpse on the front. Inside, it said, 'At least she can still attract flies ... from your mother.'"

Rudner also delivered plenty of jokes about her teenage daughter, Molly, who she said recently sprained her optic nerves from rolling her eyes so much.

"I can't believe she just turned 16," Rudner said. "I'm still trying to lose the weight. And she was adopted."

When Molly eats a doughnut, Rudner said, she thinks "That was delicious."

"When I eat a doughnut, I think 'You're a stinking piece of filth and you don't deserve to roam this Earth,'" Rudner said.

From Ubers to smart phones, Rudner delivered a smooth, relatable and hilarious routine.
